

Titled Effective Community Living, it is an attempt briefly to present sociological concepts to laymen in nontechnical language. Roy Buck, associate professor of rural sociology at Penn State, is the author. One lesson is on leadership and program planning, another on group discussion. "How Groups Change" is the title of the final lesson. To get the course, write to Correspondence Courses, 202 Agricultural Education Building, University Park, Pennsylvania. Include your name, address, and registration fee of $1.50. Make checks payable to the Pennsylvania State University.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Quid Pro Quo, University Vacations Exchange, 865 West End Avenue, New York 25, N.Y., is a new service to fill the need of faculty members planning to visit new areas to obtain inexpensive and comfortable living accommodations. This is accomplished through the exchange of living accommodations between faculty members going to one another's areas. Exchanges are arranged between faculty members in different parts of this country, between faculty members in this country and Canada, and between university personnel here and in western Europe.

For sociologists engaged in field work, whether for the summer or for the whole year, the service can eliminate all charges for accommodation, bringing the cost of work down virtually to traveling expenses and the incidentals involved in research projects. Married graduate students in good standing are eligible to use the service.

All parts of the United States and Canada and all countries of western Europe, except Spain, Portugal, and Greece, are comprehended in the service.

The fees for exchanges, payable by both parties to the exchange, are as follows: In the U.S. and Canada $25 for periods up to one month and $40 if the exchange is desired for a longer period. For Europe the charge is $75 for an exchange of whatever duration.

Write to Quid Pro Quo, 865 West End Avenue, New York 25, N.Y., for full details.
